

You say you need a voice recording? You've come to the right place.

Now, why would anyone need a voice recording? You might have written a book or perhaps a training manual or set of instructions. You want them made available to the public or your client in audio form as well as in print. Or perhaps you have an upcoming event (or a recurring event) that could use professional voiceover to be broadcast at just the right times. Maybe you're creating an online course and you need a voice to narrate and guide. A professional voice over might serve as a guided "tour" or an explanation of a series of images. Some projects just call for professional voice work.

Do you want to hear a sample first? If you send us a short script, we'll create a sample of how the recording might sound — and then send it to you as a WAV or MP3 file. Then you can decide whether you want to commit.

Whatever your voice needs, Tamarack Communication can actually help you — if a female voice is what you need. Lynn Gerlach has decades of experience as a public speaker, a speech teacher, and a presentation coach. In addition, she has been "the voice" for several online courses. In fact, you can access one of those courses here, with a bonus: In addition to finding one of Lynn's courses in successful presenting, you will also be able to actually listen to her recorded voice.

Give us a try. We have a pleasant surprise in store for you.
